

Abstract

The present invention provides a column for the concentration of components in a sample. The invented column is a column for the concentration of components for use in a high performance liquid chromatography and includes a membrane for diffusing a target component and a membrane for adsorbing the target component. This column is particularly useful for liquid microchromatography.

004750 ET54560